Yes. During my college days, I was part of the Rotaract Club. I was involved in the initial stages and helped with a few small volunteering activities, such as supporting blood donation drives, health check-up camps, and community awareness campaigns. Although my involvement was limited, it gave me an opportunity to experience volunteering and understand the importance of contributing to the community.	1

Think of the last time you got curious about a cause or activity you were not part of. What did you do about it?

Anything animal welfare related i am very curious and passionate about, but never got a chance to.	1
Cause/Activity: Local stray dog feeding initiative. What I did: I looked up their social media page to see how they operate, but I haven't volunteered yet.	1
Poster presentation	1
Sometime a begger would ask for money but i did not give him	1
The floor relief program which has been going in Nepal	1
Cause/activity: Community service and volunteering What I did next: I searched for local volunteering opportunities and learned more about how I could get involved.	1
The last time I felt really curious about a cause was during the Chennai floods in December 2015. It was a very unexpected and difficult situation, and I was also personally affected by the floods. What really stayed with me was seeing so many volunteers come forward to help people who were in urgent need, even when they were not directly connected to them. Seeing their efforts made me think that I would also have liked to go out and help people in some way. I was only around 14 at the time, so I wasn't sure how much I could actually do, but it definitely made me realize how meaningful volunteering and helping others can be.	1
